INTERNEED AT ZANDRA RHODES CREATED OWN FASHION LABEL

Educated at Regent's University London

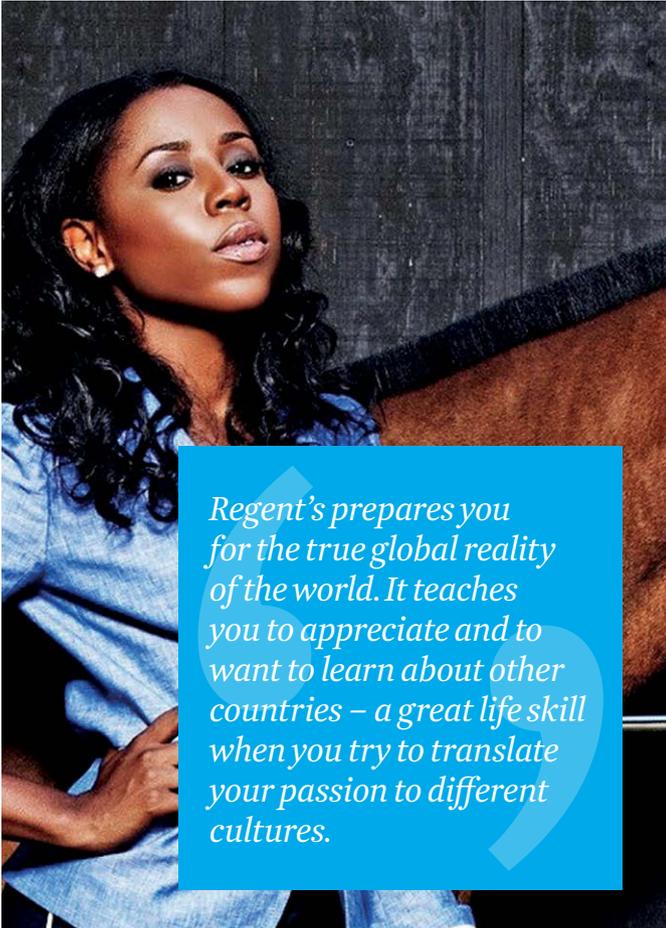

What made me an innovative designer was the focus on conceptual design, creating original and avant-garde fashion, which taught me to approach fashion in a much more interesting way.

Christine Smith Egeland, Norway
BA (Hons) Fashion Design

On graduation, Christine Egeland launched her own collection, Stina Smith, which was featured in London Fashion Week. Her studies at Regent's gave her a strong foundation in technical and design skills, but most importantly it helped to develop her personal philosophy of fashion and design.

SUCCEED

Regent's prepares you for the true global reality of the world. It teaches you to appreciate and to want to learn about other countries – a great life skill when you try to translate your passion to different cultures.

Neku Atawodi

MA Management (2010)

Entrepreneur Neku Atawodi has a number of impressive accolades to her name. She was the world's first black female professional polo player, and – having founded a hotel, crowdfunding platform and non-profit organisation – was named as one of Forbes' Africa's 30 most promising entrepreneurs under 30. Her crowdfunding platform, Malaik, focuses on raising finance for socially conscious businesses. Her charity, Ride to Shine, offers less privileged children sporting and educational opportunities that would otherwise be out of their reach.

Regent's was the place I called home for four years. There is so much diversity here, which really helped me to understand people. I had the chance to interact with people from all over the world, from China, to America to Australia.

Makhdoom Fakhar Zaman

BA (Hons) Global Management /
Global Business Management (2014)

Regent's alumnus Makhdoom Fakhar Zaman was elected as Chairman of Pakistan's Matiari District at the age of 25 – the youngest-ever district council chairman in the country's history. His focus is on healthcare and education. Makhdoom wants the women in the District to receive a high level of education and to have completely equal rights and freedom. He would also like to introduce reverse-osmosis plants to the District, to provide everyone with access to pure drinking water.

Regent's graduates go on to make their mark in many different industries and professions, and very often become trailblazers in their field.

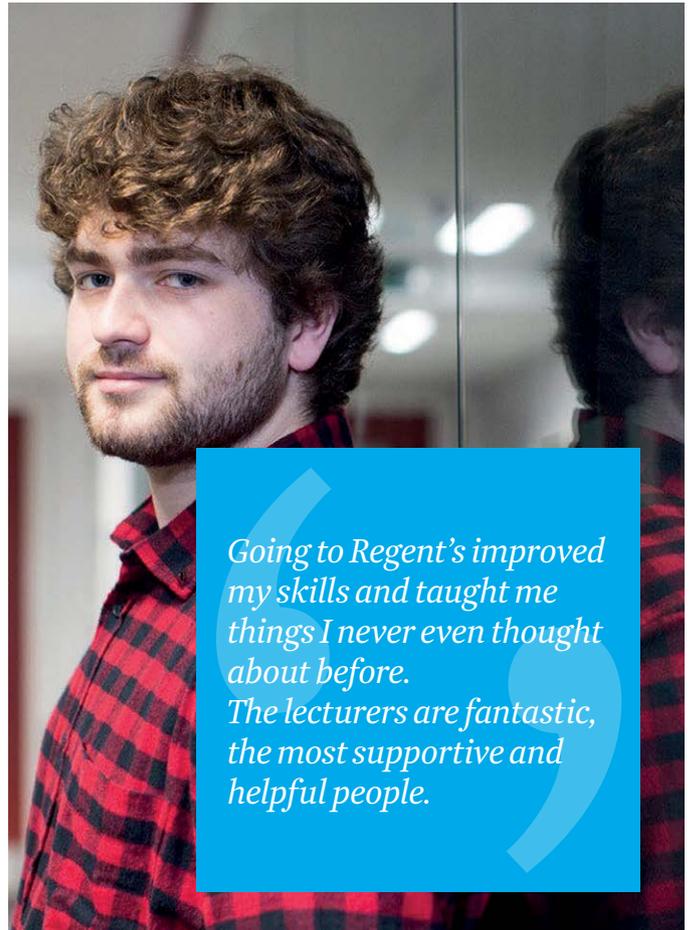

Professionally, I like saying I trained at Regent's. It's something to be proud of. It's credible and distinguished. Regent's is about learning and studying but it's also about getting the most out of life.

Charlotte Fox Weber

MA Psychotherapy & Counselling (2016)
Advanced Diploma in Integrative
Psychotherapy

Charlotte started a private psychotherapy practice while she was still in training. When she graduated, she had already started seeing clients privately (being a member of BACP) and her UKCP accreditation helped her feel confident that she was now fully qualified and ready to be a psychotherapist. She found that Regent's had a warm and encouraging atmosphere and that her supervisors and lecturers were both nurturing and challenging.

Going to Regent's improved my skills and taught me things I never even thought about before. The lecturers are fantastic, the most supportive and helpful people.

Jake Kipping

BA (Hons) Screenwriting & Producing (2016)

Jake Kipping's short film Will You be Mime? was accepted for 22 festivals, has won eight awards and received a 4.5 star review from Indie Shorts Mag. He and his friends had always talked about setting up a company that dives into all aspects of the arts – anything ranging from film, TV, theatre and fine arts. So far, they have made four short films, as well as a music video and a commercial. They are currently planning their next short film, and another one of their films, SALT, has been accepted for the London Short Film Festival.
